Urgently needed: Ideas for a more sustainable mobility

To save on resources and to get around in a more sustainable way, ideas and initiatives are needed - not just from politicians, but from all of us.

Take our individual mobility by car as an example: Switching from combustion cars to new electric vehicles is great. However, in addition more existing vehicles should be converted to electric. That is the concern of the authors of the book „Deep dive EV conversion “.

By describing the advantages and the process of a specific conversion in detail, they want to inspire ambitious car guys for such projects. On the other hand, experts from the automotive industry should be encouraged to standardize conversions and to develop more conversion kits for volume production models.
